

Ameil J. Joseph

MSW, RSW, Ph.D. | Associate Professor

Book

Chapters

Current Research

McMaster University

PARTICIPANTS NEEDED FOR RESEARCH ON IMMIGRATION DETENTION AND DEPORTATION

If you are an adult over the age of 18, have experiences with immigration detention and/or deportation and have experiences of mental health concerns and/or mental illness: I invite you to participate in a research study on the experiences of Canadian immigrants with immigration detention and deportation.

Your participation would involve two (2) sessions: one (1) focus group and one (1) follow up interview, each session will be about one (1) hour long

In appreciation for your time, you will receive $25 per session

For more information about this study, or to volunteer for this study, please contact:
Dr. Ameil Joseph
 McMaster University
 School of Social Work
 905-525-9140 Ext. 23792 or
 Email: ameilj@mcmaster.ca

Canada

This study has been reviewed by and received ethics clearance by the McMaster Research Ethics Board.

Journal Articles

The necessity of an attention to Eurocentrism and colonial technologies: an addition to critical mental health literature
 Ameil J. Joseph
 Journal of Mental Health, 2018, Volume 27, Issue 1, Pages 1-10

Abstract
 Critical perspectives in mental health and the high industrialized countries of the West, like Canada, with specific attention to the development of a more inclusive, anti-racist, and anti-colonial approach to mental health care. This article examines the role of Eurocentrism and colonial technologies in the development of mental health care in Canada. It argues that the current mental health care system in Canada is a product of a long history of colonialism and Eurocentrism. It calls for a more inclusive, anti-racist, and anti-colonial approach to mental health care that recognizes the experiences of people of color and the need for a more holistic and community-based approach to mental health care.

Beyond Diagnostic Finalities of Identity
 Ameil J. Joseph
 Journal of Mental Health, 2018, Volume 27, Issue 1, Pages 1-10

Abstract
 Intersectional approaches are often called upon in social work education and practice to conceptualize issues like class, class, gender, sexual orientation, ability, and race. However, these approaches are often limited by their focus on individual identity and their failure to address the broader social and political context in which these identities are formed. This article argues that a more holistic and community-based approach to mental health care is needed that recognizes the experiences of people of color and the need for a more holistic and community-based approach to mental health care.

Standing Strong
 Hamilton Urban Core Community Health Centre
 2018-2019 Annual General Meeting
 Thursday September 26, 2019
 5:00 pm to 7:30 pm

“Race & Racism in Hamilton”
 Special Guest Speaker:
Dr. Ameil Joseph, Associate Professor
 School of Social Work, McMaster University

71 Rebecca Street (corner of John and Rebecca Street)
 For information or to confirm please contact Nadine at: 905-525-3233 or administration@hucchc.com

Description
 The Early Career Researcher Award recognizes the research excellence of an early career Social Sciences faculty member. Research excellence is demonstrated through contributions to one's field of study, an ability to provide a stimulating and challenging research environment that incorporates students and teaching, and an ability to communicate research results effectively to relevant audiences.

Value
 One $1000 prize

2019 Early Career Researcher Award Winners

Congratulations to Ameil Joseph (School of Social Work), Hanna Teravainen (Religious Studies) and Pia Pajalas (Economics), winners of the 2019 McMaster Faculty of Social Sciences Early Career Researcher Award. Read more.

Considering “Lived Experience” Discourses in Mental Health: The Ethics of Relational Representation and the Erasure of Intersectional Complexity
 Ameil J. Joseph, MRSW, RSW, Ph.D.
 Journal of Mental Health, 2018, Volume 27, Issue 1, Pages 1-10

Abstract
 The field of lived experience has been used to mental health literature and research to claim a centrality to authority and authority in relation to voice and identity. Through an examination of discourses from the perspectives of Global Mental Health, Black Studies, and Critical Disability Studies, this article examines the role of lived experience in the development of mental health care in Canada. It argues that the current mental health care system in Canada is a product of a long history of colonialism and Eurocentrism. It calls for a more inclusive, anti-racist, and anti-colonial approach to mental health care that recognizes the experiences of people of color and the need for a more holistic and community-based approach to mental health care.

Researching Racism: The Colour of Face Value, Challenges and Opportunities
 Sarah Mateer and Ameil J. Joseph
 Journal of Mental Health, 2018, Volume 27, Issue 1, Pages 1-10

Abstract
 Researching racism in social work is a complex and challenging task. This article examines the role of racism in the development of mental health care in Canada. It argues that the current mental health care system in Canada is a product of a long history of colonialism and Eurocentrism. It calls for a more inclusive, anti-racist, and anti-colonial approach to mental health care that recognizes the experiences of people of color and the need for a more holistic and community-based approach to mental health care.

OUR TIMES
 CANADA'S INDEPENDENT LABOUR MAGAZINE

PUTTING ALT-RIGHTS' RACISM IN CONTEXT
 10-11-2019 10:00 AM - 11:00 AM

LabourStart
www.labourstart.org

A far-right primer: From extremist preachers to combat-ready Islamophobes
 "I think we all have a role to play in exposing the truth behind some of the activities that some of these hate groups and their members are involved in," says McMaster University professor Ameil Joseph

July 10, 2019 | by TheDailyStar.com | TheHealthPress.com

Hamilton Health Sciences Ethics & Diversity Grand Rounds

Dr. Ameil Joseph
 School of Social Work, McMaster University

Confronting and Challenging Racism in Healthcare: The Ethical Necessity of Anti-racism for Practice

A Prescription for Violence: The Legacy of Colonialism in Contemporary Forensic Mental Health and the Production of Difference
 Ameil J. Joseph
 Journal of Mental Health, 2018, Volume 27, Issue 1, Pages 1-10

Abstract
 This article examines the role of colonialism in the development of mental health care in Canada. It argues that the current mental health care system in Canada is a product of a long history of colonialism and Eurocentrism. It calls for a more inclusive, anti-racist, and anti-colonial approach to mental health care that recognizes the experiences of people of color and the need for a more holistic and community-based approach to mental health care.

THE INVISIBLE MALLORY: SICKLE CELL ANEMIA IN AMERICA, 1910-1970
 Ameil J. Joseph
 Journal of Mental Health, 2018, Volume 27, Issue 1, Pages 1-10

Abstract
 This article examines the role of sickle cell anemia in the development of mental health care in Canada. It argues that the current mental health care system in Canada is a product of a long history of colonialism and Eurocentrism. It calls for a more inclusive, anti-racist, and anti-colonial approach to mental health care that recognizes the experiences of people of color and the need for a more holistic and community-based approach to mental health care.

THE HAMILTON SPECTATOR

LabourStart
www.labourstart.org

LabourStart
www.labourstart.org

TV GO

My Morning
 Your Morning. What you need to know about political extremism in 2017.

Community

Medical History
 Sickle Cell Anemia in America, 1910-1970

LabourStart
www.labourstart.org

LabourStart
www.labourstart.org

LabourStart
www.labourstart.org

TV GO

My Morning
 Your Morning. What you need to know about political extremism in 2017.